DUSK was falling,
Day had fled,
Love notes calling
Soft, from a songbird o'er head,
As he sang to his mate on the bough of a tree,
And the darkness enfolded them tenderly.

Twilight was stealing swift away,
And the pale evening star far above,
Sparkling so gay, was seeming to say,
"Tis a night of delight and love;"
All through the dark I linger'd on,
Till the sun came to kiss the dew;
Long was the night but it brought the dawn,
And the dawn brought me love and you!

Daylight fading
In the west,
Love birds slumb'ring
Deep, in the warmth of their nest;
Then the call of a wandering bird from on high,
As he sings while he soars far aloft in the sky.
