CHAS. ROBINSON.

Allegretto.

There's a la - dy in the cho - rus of the Flo - ra - do - ra show Her One eve - ning to the stage - door came a great big coll - ege chap He pro - per name is Flo - ra but her sup - per name is Flo. This said that he'd see Flo - ra home or there would be a scrap. Then girl is ve - ry pop - u - lar she's in the gay sex - tette And her Flo - ra's hus - band told him that he'd have to guess a - gain, And what hus - band looks just like a ci - ga - rette. But she hap - pened next, he nev - er can ex - plain, But he tells her friends she won him on a bet. When he thought he was run o - ver by a train. He went calls a - round to take her home, she tries to pass him by, She home to find his Flo - ra and to ask her where she'd been, She does her best to lose him, for she's oth - er fish to fry, — He did - n't re - cog-nize him, and she would - n't let him in, — She waits for her each eve - ning, but the stage door lamp is dim. And it's called up two po - lice - men, and they near - ly broke his head. For they real - ly hard to see him, he's so slim, — So he clubbed him un - til he was near - ly dead, — And as sings this song to let her know it's him. — he fell down the stairs he faint - ly said. —

CHORUS.

Oh Flo - ra, I am your a - do - rer Flo - ra can't you see, — What

can the trou - ble be, — Why don't you know it's me, — Oh you must love some one, I know that's true, But I'm the fel - low that mar - ried you Oh

Flo - ra, Flo - ra I am your A - do - rer. Oh rer. —
