each and ev'-ry coon that's in the town,— He told his Li - za Jane, He now I hav - n't ev - en got a dime,— That coon was tak - en sick, And had the great - est name of an - y coon that walked up - on the wrote a let - ter quick, His babe she was - n't speak - ing at the land,— She sim - ply bowed her head looked at him and said, I be - time,— You are my tur - tle dove, the on - ly one I love, My lieve my soul that you are cra - zy man,— This heart for you is al - ways di - vine,— That gal she then got mad and start - ed to get bad, And gal she then came back to see her lov - ing Jack Rolled her eyes and slow - ly walked a - way — It won't be ve - ry long — be-real - ly found this coon with - out a home. — She looked then with a sigh, — a fore you see you're wrong, And then to you I'se certainly gwine to say. — tear came in her eye, And then this coon he sad - ly heard her moan. —

CHORUS.

Don't you wor - ry a - bout an - y one, If you do you'll lose your p-f mind— Can't you see the way you are by be-ing so good and kind You can lis - ten to— ev' - ry one but hold on to your wealth Don't you wor - ry a - bout an - y one, Just look out for your - self. self.—
